Combs Lane
The village sheep wash was situated near to the junction of Combs Lane and Quaker Lane near where the bench is now.

Beyond the turning leading to the Halifax Bomber Memorial, Combs Lane continues up towards Combs Farm and a public footpath leads up the hill passing to Combs Wood . The Robin Hood Way passes through Combs Wood, making it a popular walking route especially in the spring when the wood has an abundance of bluebells and wild garlic.

Combs Farm has always been one of the largest in the village and in the 18th century it was in the possession of the Warren family and in the 19th century by the Carding family. It is now farmed by the Collinghams. In the Iron Age one of two fortified settlements found near Farnsfield was situated at Combs Farm. It which may have had a bank four feet high above a ditch ten feet deep. There is no evidence of a Roman fort here, although small pieces of pottery, including Samian ware, show that the fort was occupied during Roman times up to the second century AD. The second Iron Age site is at Camp Hill between Kirklington and Farnsfield.

Further information: Iron Age Fort near Combs Farm & Iron Age Forts History